"Down to Earth"
Full Circle Supply Can Save Money and Help You Be Green

By Brittany Musalie
Guest Reporter

Looking for a green place to shop while still saving money? Check out La Croisse’s Full Circle Supply. Located now at their new downtown location, 521 Main Street, Full Circle Supply is a store that can help students both decrease their environmental impact, and use healthier products.

Full Circle Supply operates by a "sell by ounce" principle, so students can only buy as much as they need or want to try out.

Green Tip of the Week:
Plan your meals! Up to 40 percent of the food produced in the U.S. is thrown away. Try sharing food or making sure you buy only what you need.

When shopping at the store, there is no extra packaging or bottles everywhere in a large containers that can be dispersed into any container you want. If you don’t have a container with you, you can purchase one at the store. With this system, the store cuts down on plastic use. To date, they estimate they’ve saved over 1,000 containers! That’s 483 pounds of plastic kept from being incinerated in the La Crosse area. In addition, as packaging accounts for 20% of.

What’s Happening:
- See the Lights 7 p.m., Every Tuesday, 2214 Centennial
- BattleShots 2 p.m., April 10th, Mitchell Hall
- Countdown to Earth Week Film Festival 7 p.m., April 16th, 1309 Centennial

UW-L children’s theatre charms all ages

By Emily Markham
Staff Reporter

Once upon a time in the kingdom of UW-La Crosse, there was a university putting on a play for its children’s theater production. This week’s show, titled "The Basket," is a fairytale that takes the combination of eight different fairytales. Each story has its own unique twist, but all feature the same message of being selfless, working together, or accepting others. This show is a great introduction of the world of theater production, though; it is unique in countless different ways.

With eight fairytales and a limited number of actors, many of the actors are playing four or more characters throughout the show, but they are all the actors character, apart using accents, different physical movements, and, of course, costumes. Also, all the sound in this production is live, meaning there will be no pan banging, animal noises, live instruments and more all happening right backstage. In this play, the actors will be doing their own narration instead of having a narrator, and throughout this show is the children’s theatre, there’s little something for all ages to enjoy.

As sophomore Makenna Johnson—a chaezel with her various roles—puts it, "The characters are all different ages and very relatable with the things they want and the choices they make. The lighting, voices and times are very fun, and who doesn’t like being brought back to childhood with a fairy tale?"

The best part about this show though, is that it is interactive. The actors will talk to the audience and ask them different questions throughout the performance. So, go invite your nieces, nephews, or even grandmas to come and just connect with your inner child because this will be a show you don’t want to miss.

If you go...
- What: "In One Basket" by Shirley Jackson
- Where: Frederick Theatre, Morris Hall
- When: April 11 at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m.
- Tickets: $8 for adults, $5 for children (under 13) and UW-L students